Miriam is working hard to earn the money her family needs to fix their house. She can't afford to be distracted by anything; certainly not by Abram, the son of the man who owns the store where she sells her wares.

But when Abram comes to her and talks about his troubles with the girl he is courting, Miriam thinks their long friendship may be turning into something else.

Will Miriam be able to save her parents' home? Will Abram admit his feelings for his childhood friend? Or will his fixation on and loyalty to his current girlfriend cause everyone's plans to fall apart?
