Celia Summers, intrepid mother of two, is too cuddly for sweatpants, she suspects. But then, her class at The Harbour Rest Home are similarly clad. Celia loves her work as an art therapist. She's proud that she gives her elderly independents something to look forward to, even if her partner, Martin, disapproves of her efforts. He also has other things on his mind - telling complicated lies to Celia so he can sell Charlton Hall, his mum's house, to pay off his debts. Meanwhile, Celia fights to secure gallery space for her geriatric charges' artwork, and to keep The Harbour from being closed. She's even ready to abseil from a church steeple to bring attention to the plight of her old people, no matter that she might fall and end up splattered all over the flagstones. When she does fall, however, it's much more painful - in love with PC Alex Burrows coming to her rescue Saffhet Soul, our romantic comedy imprint, was launched options if you use a different distributor! on Valentine's Day 2012. Bringing fresh, funny and fabulous stories, Saffhet Soul will paint a smile (in lip gloss) on the face of every rom com reader. A Little Bit of Madness is the third in a series of stories starring those beautiful boys in blue.
