AMERICAN WARRIORS -WW2 - Illustrated VOLUME 1: MEMORIES OF WAR - CITIZEN SOLDIERS USA - WORLD WAR 2 PETER FLEMING

War offered the Roman citizen of the republic the possibility of returning covered in glory, having won both land and money.

To the Romans of the early republic serving in the legion and war itself were the same thing. For Rome had no army unless it was at war. As long as there was peace, people stayed at home and there was no army. This shows the essentially civilian nature of Roman society. But Rome is still famed today for being in a state of near constant warfare.

The changeover from peace to warfare was a mental as well as spiritual change. When war was decided upon by the senate then the doors to the temple of the god Janus would be opened. Only once Rome was at peace would the doors be closed again. - The gates of Janus were almost always open.

For the citizen becoming a soldier was a transformation far beyond simply donning his armour.

When war was declared and an army would be raised, a red flag was hoisted over the capitol of Rome. The news would be carried out to all the territory under Roman rule. The hoisting of the red flag meant that all men subject to military service had thirty days to report for duty.....

So was the case of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA when it entered the Second World War. Its citizens responded the call to arms and soon they were deployed practically all over the world fighting , building and serving for freedom.
