The House Next Door (Mister Jones Mysteries Book 3) Will Macmillan Jones

Mister Jones thought he had finished with the supernatural world - but the supernatural hadn't finished with him...

When Sheila finds herself compelled to buy a genuine antique in a strange little shop, she didn't bargain for what came with the statuette - and Mister Jones finds himself once again drawn into the dangerous world of the paranormal : this time via the house next door.

An ancient evil has found a way to break from his enchanted prison and the only one who is going to stand in his way is the unfortunate Mister Jones, who seems destined to live in interesting times.

The House Next Door is the third in the highly regarded 'Mister Jones' collection of paranormal mysteries

What reviewers have said about the first two books: The Showing & Portrait of A Girl

'An old-fashioned Dennis Wheatley feel'

'A mad rush into danger that classic Horror lovers will adore'

'The further I read, the more difficulty I had putting it down'

'Entertaining, well-written, with a chilling ending!'
