Here is a list of what the plays allude to:

American Afterlife is a short comedic play, which takes place in a waiting room in Heaven or Bardo. It alludes to the characters Willie Loman from Death of a Salesman, Dave Moss and Shelly Levine from Glengary Glenn Ross, and Dexter Green from "Winter Dreams." They are all businessmen who have passed away and are waiting to be reborn into the next life.

All-American Woman is a short, comedic play which takes place in a bar. It uses characters from the short stories "The Birthmark" and "The Bachelors Paradise and Tarterus of Maids," and the real life first wave feminist, playwright, and essayist Judith Sargent Murray. It is a commentary on what society believes American women should be like, which has not changed that much in the last hundred or so years, since these short stories were written and Judith Sargent Murray was alive.

Existential Dilemma uses characters from the movies The Truman Show, The Matrix, Existenz, Inception, and Vanilla Sky, as well as the scientist Albert Einstein, and playwright William Shakespeare. It takes these characters and compares and contrasts the concepts in the movies that life is a spiritual matrix, a virtual reality video game, a computer simulation, a shared dream, or just one person's dream, all in our heads, and perhaps revolves just around one person's consciousness.

Ascended Masters and Goddesses takes the religious, spiritual and philosophical figures Diogenes, Jesus, Buddha, Kali, Isis, Lao Tzu, and Star and puts them in a studio apartment in which they all attempt to assist a mid-20s grad student named Salma who is without a job and might get evicted, if her already late school refund check does not show up in time.
