Modern pagans are not satanists; instead, they reverence Nature as the manifestation of the Divine rather than the gods of familiar organized religions. The old pagan gods and goddesses that were legally suppressed and brutally driven from Nature are, according to poet Gary Scheer, returning from their exile--as universal archetypes alive in each and every one of us. Gary's poems, collected here and presented by his wife Stephanie, range over diverse spiritual topics, such as love, ecology, magick, astrology, reincarnation, and ontology. In addition to the standard length poems are over one hundred enchanting haiku poems, plus, a chapter of enlightening and thought provoking prose quotations.
